COVID19 Still With Us Even as We Open Up

The most up to date studies on emerging data for this virus show a significant portion of individuals with COVID-19 do not have symptoms (“asymptomatic”). Furthermore, people can transmit the virus to others before showing symptoms (“pre-symptomatic”). This means that the virus can spread between people interacting in close proximity—for example, speaking, coughing or sneezing, shaking hands or hugging—even if those people are not feeling ill. Until there is a cure or a vaccine, the opportunity for spikes in infections driving hospitalizations, incubations and loss of life will remain with the world.

Other Notes

- Weekends
